DBCAE

The correct answer is: ACEBD

Here's the coherent paragraph:

The Environment Education unit of Centre for Science & Environment has always been working towards providing easy to understand reading material. (A) Their new publication on this subject is an attempt to lend teachers a helping hand. (C) It unfolds in two sections: Climate change: how to make sense of it all (E) And natural resources how to share & care. (B) However, they are introduced to students not as a paragraph to memorize but as an activity to do. (D)

This order makes logical sense because it introduces the organization and its goal (A), explains the purpose of the new publication (C), describes the content of the publication (E), mentions the title of the sections (B), and finally explains how the content is presented to students (D).

The correct answer is: ACDEB

Here's the coherent paragraph:

The post-election crisis in Kenya remains unresolved. (A) As the situation in Kenya escalated with murders, rapes, burning of property, looting, and the displacement of thousands of people throughout the country - the international community was urged to help. (C) Many countries responded, providing essential humanitarian assistance and logistical support. For this, I and many other Kenyans are very grateful. (D) The damage being done to the country's economy is severe: tourism, horticulture, and other industries that depend on trade beyond the Kenyan border are reeling. (E) Thousands of livelihoods, along with investments throughout the region, are threatened and collapsing. (B)

This order makes logical sense because it:

1. Introduces the crisis (A)
2. Describes the escalation of the situation (C)
3. Acknowledges international assistance (D)
4. Explains the economic impact (E)
5. Highlights the human impact (B)

The hunchback was being laughed at by everyone

Flag

Previous

Answer

Everyone laughed at the hunchback.

Everyone is laughing at the hunchback

Everyone was laughing at the hunchback.

Everyone laughs at the hunchback

The correct answer is: Everyone was laughing at the hunchback.

The original sentence is in the passive voice, indicating that the hunchback was the recipient of the action (being laughed at). The correct active voice equivalent is "Everyone was laughing at the hunchback", which indicates that everyone was performing the action (laughing).

Here's a brief explanation of the other options:

- "Everyone laughs at the hunchback" is in the present simple tense, implying a general or habitual action, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "Everyone is laughing at the hunchback" is in the present continuous tense, implying an ongoing action, which also doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "Everyone laughed at the hunchback" is in the simple past tense, which is close, but the original sentence uses the past continuous tense ("was being laughed at"), implying an ongoing action in the past.

Answer

You might have done the job.

You may do the job.

You may be doing the job.

You might do the job.

The correct answer is: You may do the job.

The original sentence is in the passive voice, indicating that the job may be performed by someone (you). The correct active voice equivalent is "You may do the job", which indicates that you have the possibility or permission to perform the action (doing the job).

Here's a brief explanation of the other options:

- "You might have done the job" is in the past perfect tense, implying an action that may have occurred before another action in the past, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "You may be doing the job" is in the present continuous tense, implying an ongoing action, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.

- "You might do the job" is close, but it implies a slightly different meaning, suggesting a possibility or chance, whereas "You may do the job" implies permission or possibility.

The corrected sentence would be:

"Either Gopi or Hari is in the wrong; both can certainly never be."

The word "either" indicates a choice between two options, making the subject singular.

The correct answer is: Me and my colleague

The error is in the subject-verb agreement and word order. The correct sentence should be:

"My colleague and I went to the party."

The mistake is using "Me" instead of "I" as the subject of the sentence. "Me" is an object pronoun, whereas "I" is a subject pronoun. Additionally, it's more polite to put the other person's name or title before your own, hence "My colleague and I".

Next

Answer

All tasks were handled efficiently by her.

All tasks are being handled efficiently by her.

All tasks are handled efficiently by her.

All tasks have been handled efficiently by her.

The correct answer is: All tasks are handled efficiently by her.

The original sentence is in the active voice, indicating that She (the subject) performs the action (handles tasks). The correct passive voice equivalent is "All tasks are handled efficiently by her", which indicates that the tasks (the subject) receive the action (are handled).

Here's a brief explanation of the other options:

- "All tasks were handled efficiently by her" is in the past simple tense, implying a completed action in the past, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "All tasks are being handled efficiently by her" is in the present continuous tense, implying an ongoing action, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "All tasks have been handled efficiently by her" is in the present perfect tense, implying an action that started in the past and continues up to the present, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.

Note: The original sentence is in the present simple tense, so the correct passive form should also be in the present simple tense.

A number of protestors had been beaten by the police last night.

A number of protestors has been beaten by the police the night before.

A number of protestors were beaten by the police last night.

A number of protestors were being beaten by the police last night.

The correct answer is: A number of protestors were beaten by the police last night.

The original sentence is in the active voice, indicating that the police (the subject) performed the action (beat protestors). The correct passive voice equivalent is "A number of protestors were beaten by the police last night", which indicates that the protestors (the subject) received the action (were beaten).

Here's a brief explanation of the other options:

- "A number of protestors had been beaten by the police last night" is in the past perfect tense, implying an action that occurred before another action in the past, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.
- "A number of protestors has been beaten by the police the night before" is incorrect because "has been beaten" is in the present perfect tense, which doesn't match the original sentence's context, and "the night before" changes the time frame.
- "A number of protestors were being beaten by the police last night" is in the past continuous tense, implying an ongoing action at a specific point in the past, which doesn't match the original sentence's context.

Note: The original sentence is in the simple past tense, so the correct passive form should also be in the simple past tense.

What do tenses as the form of a verb help to determine?

Flag

Previous

Next

Answer

The time of the action

The number of action

Both time and state of action

The state of the action

The correct answer is: Both time and state of action

Tenses, as a form of a verb, help to determine:

1. Time of the action: Tenses indicate when an action takes place, such as past, present, or future.
2. State of the action: Tenses also indicate the state of the action, such as:
    - Simple (completed action)
    - Progressive (ongoing action)
    - Perfect (completed action with a connection to the present)
    - Perfect Continuous (ongoing action with a connection to the present)

For example:

- "I go" (present simple) indicates a habitual action
- "I am going" (present progressive) indicates an ongoing action
- "I have gone" (present perfect) indicates a completed action with a connection to the present
- "I have been going" (present perfect continuous) indicates an ongoing action with a connection to the present

So, tenses help to convey both the time and the state of the action, making option C the correct answer.

the time of action is correct

You're right, the correct answer is indeed:

A. The time of the action

Tenses, as a form of a verb, primarily help to determine the time of the action, such as:

- Past (e.g., I went)
- Present (e.g., I go)
- Future (e.g., I will go)

While tenses also provide some information about the state of the action (e.g., completed, ongoing), their primary function is to indicate when the action takes place, making option A the most accurate answer. Thank you for correcting me!

The correct answer is: have been

The correct sentence would be:

"Neither of the paintings have been sold."

This is because the subject "Neither of the paintings" is a singular subject, and the verb "have been" is in the present perfect tense, indicating that the action of selling has not happened to either of the paintings.

Note: The verb "have been" is used instead of "has been" because "neither" is used to indicate two items, and the verb agrees with the plural noun "paintings".

Also, the word "painting" should be "paintings" (plural) because "neither" indicates two items.

it is was

You're right, the correct answer is indeed:

was

The correct sentence would be:

"Neither of the paintings was sold."

This is because the subject "Neither of the paintings" is a singular subject, and the verb "was" is in the past simple tense, indicating that the action of selling did not happen to either of the paintings.

The verb "was" is used instead of "were" because "neither" is a singular pronoun, and the verb agrees with the singular subject.

Here's the logical order of sentences to construct a coherent paragraph:

B. It is said that Gautam Buddha gathered his disciples one day for a Dharma talk.

A. When they gathered together, the Buddha was completely silent & some speculated that perhaps the Buddha was tired or ill.

E. The Buddha silently held up & twirled a flower and twinkled his eyes, several of his disciples tried to interpret what this meant though none of them was correct.

C. One of the Buddha’s disciples, Mahakasyapa, silently gazed at the flower & broke into a broad smile.

D. The origin of Zen Buddhism is ascribed to the Flower Sermon, the earliest source which comes from the 14th century.

This order makes sense because:

- B introduces the scene and the Buddha's gathering with his disciples.
- A describes the initial silence and speculation among the disciples.
- E describes the Buddha's action with the flower, which sparks interpretation from the disciples.
- C highlights Mahakasyapa's unique response to the flower.
- D provides historical context and significance to the event, known as the Flower Sermon.

C. The monsoon failed and water tanks became almost empty.

D. So, no grain could be sown by the farmers in their fields.

A. People started fearing a famine.

E. Farmers looked anxiously for the next monsoon.

B. Monsoon turned out to be unusually abundant and the danger was averted.

This order makes sense because:

- C describes the initial problem of the monsoon failing.
- D explains the consequence of the failed monsoon (no grain could be sown).
- A describes the resulting fear of famine.
- E shows the farmers' anxiety and hope for a better next monsoon.
- B provides a resolution, where the next monsoon is abundant and averts the danger.

This order creates a coherent narrative flow, from problem to consequence to fear to hope to resolution.

C. The river overflowed its banks.

E. The terrified villagers abandoned their homes.

A. They fled to the higher ground.

B. Soon the floods retired and the villagers were able to return.

This order makes sense because:

- D describes the initial cause of the flooding (rain).
- C describes the consequence of the rain (river overflowing).
- E describes the villagers' reaction to the flooding (abandoning homes).
- A describes their escape to higher ground.
- B describes the resolution (floods receding, villagers returning).

This order creates a coherent narrative flow, from cause to consequence to reaction to escape to resolution.

The correct answer is: Intrepid

Intrepid means showing courage or fearlessness in the face of danger or difficulty. It describes someone who is bold, daring, and undaunted.

The other options are related but have slightly different connotations:

- Brave refers to showing courage or strength in the face of danger or difficulty.
- Fearless refers to showing no fear or anxiety in the face of danger or difficulty.
- Shameless refers to showing no shame or remorse, often in a negative sense (e.g., shameless behavior).

While brave and fearless are close synonyms of intrepid, intrepid has a slightly stronger connotation of boldness and daring.

Our Academy has provided one to one mentorship to the students.

Our Academy is providing one to one mentorship to the students.

Our Academy provides one to one mentorship to the students.

The correct answer is: Our Academy provides one to one mentorship to the students.

The original sentence is in the passive voice, with the focus on the recipient of the action (the students). The corrected sentence is in the active voice, with the focus on the performer of the action (Our Academy).

The active voice makes the sentence more direct and clear, emphasizing the role of the Academy in providing mentorship.

The other options are incorrect because:

- The first option is grammatically incorrect and reverses the roles of the Academy and the students.
- The second option uses the present perfect tense, which changes the meaning of the sentence to imply that the mentorship has been provided at some point in the past.
- The third option uses the present continuous tense, which implies that the mentorship is being provided at this very moment, rather than being a general policy of the Academy.

The farmer's wife was collecting fresh batch of eggs.

The farmer's wife had collected a fresh batch of eggs.

The farmer's wife collected a fresh batch of eggs.

The correct answer is: The farmer's wife collected a fresh batch of eggs.

The original sentence is in the passive voice, with the focus on the eggs (the recipient of the action). The corrected sentence is in the active voice, with the focus on the performer of the action (the farmer's wife).

The active voice makes the sentence more direct and clear, emphasizing the role of the farmer's wife in collecting the eggs.

The other options are incorrect because:

- The first option uses the future passive voice, which changes the meaning of the sentence to imply that the collection of eggs is scheduled to happen in the future.
- The second option uses the past continuous tense, which implies that the farmer's wife was in the process of collecting eggs at a specific point in the past.
- The third option uses the past perfect tense, which implies that the farmer's wife had collected the eggs before some other action occurred in the past.

Only the fourth option, "The farmer's wife collected a fresh batch of eggs", is in the simple past tense and active voice, making it the correct choice.

The passive voice is used to emphasize the recipient of the action, or to make the sentence more formal or objective.

The other options are incorrect because:

- The first option is grammatically incorrect, using "be tell" instead of "be told".
- The third option is also grammatically incorrect, using "tell" instead of "told" and omitting the word "by".
- The fourth option is incomplete and lacks the necessary information about who will be performing the action (Manu).

Only the second option, "She will be told later by Manu", is in the correct passive voice form.

D. Most IT companies have been grappling with more mundane problems such as a high level of attrition amidst rising wage costs and inability to secure the right type and number of American visas.

E. The BPO industry and many medium-sized software exporters are reportedly operating on thin margins.

This order makes sense because:

- A introduces the main idea of the US market's dominance and the rupee's potential strength.
- B suggests a strategy for companies to adapt to this situation.
- C provides an example of a company that has successfully implemented this strategy.
- D describes the challenges that most IT companies are facing.

The correct answer is: The authority bade the migrant to leave the country.

The original sentence is in the passive voice, with the focus on the migrant (the recipient of the action). The corrected sentence is in the active voice, with the focus on the authority (the performer of the action).

The verb "bade" is the correct choice because it is the past tense of the verb "bid", which means to order or command. The phrase "bade to" is a correct idiomatic expression.

The other options are incorrect because:

- The second option uses "bid" instead of "bade", which is the incorrect past tense form.
- The third option is grammatically incorrect and uses the phrase "Let the migrant" which changes the meaning of the sentence.
- The fourth option is close, but it's more common to use "bade to" instead of "bade" to make the sentence more formal and idiomatic.

The other options are incorrect because:

- "has got" is in the present perfect tense, which describes an action that started in the past and continues up to the present.
- "gets" is in the present simple tense, which describes a habitual or repeated action.
- "have got" is also in the present perfect tense, which doesn't fit the context of the sentence.

Magniloquent means using high-sounding or elaborate language, often to impress others. In this context, "generous, forgiving talk" suggests a grandiose or lofty style of speaking, which aligns with the meaning of magniloquent.

The other options do not fit as well:

- Amusing refers to something that is entertaining or humorous, which doesn't match the description of "generous, forgiving talk".
- Humorous refers to something that is comical or laughable, which also doesn't match the description.
- Boastful means talking about oneself with pride and satisfaction, which doesn't align with the description of "forgiving talk".

Magniloquent is the most suitable choice to describe the type of talk mentioned.

Cricket is played by Rahul in the playground provided by the government

The correct answer is: Cricket is being played by Rahul in the playground provided by the government.

The original sentence is in the active voice, with the focus on Rahul (the performer of the action). The corrected sentence is in the passive voice, with the focus on the action (playing cricket) and the recipient of the action (cricket).

The verb "is being played" is in the present continuous passive tense, which indicates an action that is currently happening.

The other options are incorrect because:

- The first option uses the present perfect passive tense ("has been played"), which describes an action that started in the past and has a connection to the present.
- The second option is grammatically incorrect, using "is been" instead of "is being".
- The fourth option uses the simple present passive tense ("is played"), which describes a general or habitual action, rather than an action currently happening.

Only the third option, "Cricket is being played by Rahul...", correctly converts the sentence to the passive voice while maintaining the correct tense.

Answer

Someone who is very pretty

Someone who never say lie

One who is violently against established beliefs and traditions

Someone who never say truth

The correct answer is: One who is violently against established beliefs and traditions

An iconoclast is a person who challenges or attacks established beliefs, traditions, and institutions, often in a bold or provocative manner. They question or reject conventional wisdom and may advocate for radical change.

The term "iconoclast" comes from the Greek words "eikōn" (image) and "klan" (breaker), originally referring to those who destroyed religious images or icons. Today, it describes anyone who dares to challenge the status quo.

The other options are incorrect because:

- Someone who is very pretty: This describes a person's physical appearance, not their attitude towards established beliefs.
- Someone who never says a lie: This describes a person who always tells the truth, not someone who challenges traditions.
- Someone who never says the truth: This describes a person who always lies, not someone who challenges traditions.

Only the third option accurately defines an iconoclast.

Answer

Someone who is very pretty

Someone who never say lie

One who is violently against established beliefs and traditions

Someone who never say truth

The correct answer is: One who is violently against established beliefs and traditions

Iconoclast refers to a person who:

- Challenges or attacks established beliefs, traditions, and institutions
- Questions or rejects conventional wisdom
- Advocates for radical change
- Breaks away from established norms and values

The term "iconoclast" originally referred to those who destroyed religious images or icons, but now it describes anyone who dares to challenge the status quo.

The other options are incorrect because they describe:

- Physical appearance (Someone who is very pretty)
- Honesty (Someone who never says a lie)
- Dishonesty (Someone who never says the truth)

Only the third option accurately defines an iconoclast.

Flag

Previous

Next

Answer

Did they occupied the villa?

Have they occupied the villa?

Do they occupied the villa?

Had they occupied the villa?

The correct answer is: Have they occupied the villa?

The original sentence "Has the villa been occupied by them?" is in the passive voice, and it asks if the villa has been occupied by them at some point in the past.

The correct active form of the sentence is "Have they occupied the villa?", which asks if they have occupied the villa at some point in the past.

The other options are incorrect because:

- "Did they occupied the villa?" is grammatically incorrect and should be "Did they occupy the villa?" (simple past tense).
- "Do they occupied the villa?" is grammatically incorrect and should be "Do they occupy the villa?" (simple present tense).
- "Had they occupied the villa?" is in the past perfect tense, which asks if they had occupied the villa before another action in the past.

Only the second option, "Have they occupied the villa?", correctly converts the sentence to the active voice while maintaining the correct tense.

This water-tank has been built by my grandfather in 1950.

My grandfather had been building this water-tank in 1950.

This water-tank was being built by my grandfather in 1950.

This water-tank was built by my grandfather in 1950.

Here are the correct active and passive forms of the sentence:

Active form: My grandfather built this water-tank in 1950. (Original sentence)

Passive form: This water-tank was built by my grandfather in 1950.

The correct passive form is the fourth option: "This water-tank was built by my grandfather in 1950."

The other options are incorrect because:

- "This water-tank has been built by my grandfather in 1950" is in the present perfect passive tense, which implies that the action of building the tank started in the past and continues up to the present.
- "My grandfather had been building this water-tank in 1950" is in the past perfect continuous tense, which implies that the action of building the tank started before another action in the past.

- "This water-tank was being built by my grandfather in 1950" is in the past continuous passive tense, which implies that the action of building the tank was ongoing at a specific point in the past.

Only the fourth option correctly converts the sentence to the passive voice while maintaining the correct tense.

The correct answer is: ABCDE

Here's the logical order of sentences to construct a coherent paragraph:

A. Last March, I was invited to present a paper on the topic of whether the mistakes of the 20th century would be repeated in the 21st century as well.

B. The economic crisis hadn't become grave then.

C. But today the world is in the midst of the biggest economic crisis since 1929.

D. The key difference between then and now is that the old power structures have finally disappeared.

E. Now even the US is pleading for financial help from China.

This order makes sense because:

- Sentence A introduces the topic and the author's involvement.
- Sentence B provides context about the economic situation at the time of the invitation.
- Sentence C contrasts the current economic situation with the past, highlighting the severity of the crisis.
- Sentence D explains the difference between the current situation and the past.
- Sentence E provides a specific example of how the current situation has led to a shift in global power dynamics.

The other options do not provide a coherent order, as they disrupt the logical flow of ideas and context.

Here's the logical order of sentences to construct a coherent paragraph:

A. A famous Japanese rock garden is at Ryoan-Ji in Northwest Kyoto, Japan.

B. The rocks of various sizes are arranged on small white pebbles in five groups, each comprising five, two, three, two, & three rocks.

D. The garden contains 15 rocks arranged on the surface of white pebbles in such a manner that visitors can see only 14 of them at once from whichever angle the garden is viewed.

This order makes sense because:

- Sentence A introduces the location of the garden.
- Sentence C describes the garden's dimensions.
- Sentence B explains the arrangement of the rocks.
- Sentence E describes the garden's features and maintenance.
- Sentence D highlights a unique aspect of the garden's design.

The other options do not provide a coherent order, as they disrupt the logical flow of ideas and descriptions.

Identify the tense used in the following sentence. “When I reached the bookstore, all the copies had already been sold.”

Flag

Previous

Next

Answer

Present indefinite tense

Present perfect tense

Past perfect tense

Past indefinite tense

The correct answer is: Past perfect tense

The sentence "When I reached the bookstore, all the copies had already been sold" uses the past perfect tense.

Here's why:

- "When I reached the bookstore" is in the simple past tense (past indefinite tense).

- "had already been sold" is in the past perfect tense, indicating an action that occurred before another action in the past (reaching the bookstore).

The past perfect tense is used to describe an action that was completed before another action in the past. In this sentence, the copies being sold is the action that occurred before the speaker reached the bookstore.

The other options are incorrect because:

- Present indefinite tense would describe an action that happens regularly or habitually, which doesn't fit the context.
- Present perfect tense would describe an action that started in the past and continues up to the present, which doesn't fit the context.
- Past indefinite tense would describe a single action in the past, but doesn't convey the relationship between the two actions (reaching the bookstore and the copies being sold).

He was not only fined by the school but also expelled for misbehavior.

He has not only been fined by the school but has also expelled for misbehavior.

He is not only fined by the school but also expelled for misbehavior.

He will not only be fined by the school but will also be expelled for misbehavior.

The correct answer is: He was not only fined by the school but also expelled for misbehavior.

The original sentence is in the active voice, with the school performing the actions of fining and expelling.

The correct passive form of the sentence is:

"He was not only fined by the school but also expelled for misbehavior."

This sentence maintains the same meaning as the original sentence, but with the focus on the person being fined and expelled (he) rather than the school performing the actions.

The other options are incorrect because:

- Option 2 uses the present perfect passive tense ("has been fined") and incorrectly uses "has also expelled" instead of "was also expelled".
- Option 3 uses the simple present passive tense ("is fined") and incorrectly implies that the fining and expelling are ongoing actions.
- Option 4 uses the future passive tense ("will be fined") and incorrectly implies that the fining and expelling have not yet occurred.

Only the first option correctly converts the sentence to the passive voice while maintaining the correct tense.

Answer

Everyone know that the leopards is of all animals

faster

The correct answer is: Everyone know

The error in the sentence is the subject-verb agreement. The subject "Everyone" is a singular pronoun, and the verb "know" should be in the singular form "knows" to agree with it.

The corrected sentence is:

"Everyone knows that the leopard is faster than any other animal."

The other options are not the primary error in the sentence:

- "that the leopards is" would be incorrect because "leopards" is a plural noun, and the sentence is referring to a single leopard.
- "of all animals" would change the meaning of the sentence and is not the primary error.
- "faster" is not the error, as it is the correct comparative form of the adjective "fast".

The primary error is the subject-verb agreement between "Everyone" and "know".

Answer

The child should be given a nourishing diet.

The child must have given a nourishing diet.

The child is given a nourishing diet

The child was given a nourishing diet.

The correct answer is: The child should be given a nourishing diet.

The original sentence is in the active voice, with the subject (implied, "you" or "one") performing the action of giving the child a nourishing diet.

The correct passive form of the sentence is:

"The child should be given a nourishing diet."

This sentence maintains the same meaning as the original sentence, but with the focus on the child (the recipient of the action) rather than the person performing the action.

The other options are incorrect because:

- "The child must have given a nourishing diet" is incorrect because it implies that the child is the one giving the diet, rather than receiving it.
- "The child is given a nourishing diet" is in the present passive tense, implying that the action is ongoing, whereas the original sentence is a command or recommendation.
- "The child was given a nourishing diet" is in the past passive tense, implying that the action has already occurred, whereas the original sentence is a command or recommendation.

Only the first option correctly converts the sentence to the passive voice while maintaining the correct tense and meaning.

Here's the logical order of sentences to construct a coherent paragraph:

C. Cricket has been an extremely popular game in India for quite some time now.

B. During the British period also, cricket remained popular in India.

E. However, due to this reason, other games/sports did not receive the required attention they deserve.

A. Thus, despite India's huge population, we have not done well in Olympic Games.

D. It is time our government and corporate fraternity pay due attention to other games/sports and we redeem our national pride in Olympic Games.

This order makes sense because:

- Sentence C introduces the popularity of cricket in India.
- Sentence B provides historical context for cricket's popularity.
- Sentence E explains the consequence of cricket's dominance (other sports being neglected).
- Sentence A highlights the result of this neglect (poor performance in Olympic Games).
- Sentence D concludes with a call to action to address this issue.

Answer

The parents as well as the child has been invited.

The parents as well as the child have been invited.

The parents as well as the child had been invited by them.

The child as well as the parents has been invited.

The correct answer is: The parents as well as the child have been invited.

The original sentence is in the active voice, with "They" (the subject) performing the action of inviting.

The correct passive form of the sentence is:

"The parents as well as the child have been invited."

This sentence maintains the same meaning as the original sentence, but with the focus on the recipients of the action (the parents and the child) rather than the performers of the action.

The other options are incorrect because:

- "The parents as well as the child has been invited" is incorrect because the subject is plural (parents and child), and the verb should be in the plural form "have" instead of "has".
- "The parents as well as the child had been invited by them" is in the past perfect passive tense, which implies that the action occurred before another action in the past, whereas the original sentence is in the present perfect tense.
- "The child as well as the parents has been invited" is incorrect because the subject is plural (child and parents), and the verb should be in the plural form "have" instead of "has".

Only the second option correctly converts the sentence to the passive voice while maintaining the correct tense and subject-verb agreement.

Spot the Error: It was him who came running into the classroom.

Answer

running

who came

No Error

It was him

into the classroom

The correct answer is: It was him

The error in the sentence is the use of "him" instead of "he". The correct sentence should be:

"It was he who came running into the classroom."

The reason for this is that the subject of the sentence is "he", not "him". "He" is the nominative form of the pronoun, used as the subject of the sentence, whereas "him" is the objective form, used as the object of a verb or preposition.

In this sentence, "he" is the subject of the clause "who came running into the classroom", so the correct form to use is "he", not "him".

The other options are not the primary error in the sentence:

- "running" is not the error, as it is a verb in the correct form.
- "who came" is not the error, as it is a dependent clause in the correct form.
- "into the classroom" is not the error, as it is a prepositional phrase in the correct form.
- "No Error" is incorrect, as there is an error in the sentence.

The correct answer is: Incorrigible

"Incorrigible" means someone who is unable to be reformed or improved, often due to a stubborn or uncooperative nature. It describes someone who is persistently misbehaving or refusing to change their ways, despite attempts to correct or reform them.

The other options are not correct because:

- "Illegible" means something that is difficult or impossible to read, often due to poor handwriting or formatting.
- "Unintelligible" means something that is difficult or impossible to understand, often due to unclear language or expression.
- "Indelible" means something that cannot be erased or removed, often used to describe marks or impressions that are permanent.

Only "Incorrigible" accurately describes someone who is beyond reform.

Which tense is used to show the completion of an action by a certain time in the future?

Answer

Present indefinite tense

Future perfect tense

Future continuous tense

Future perfect continuous tense

The correct answer is: Future perfect tense

The Future Perfect tense is used to describe an action that will be completed by a certain time in the future. It is formed using the auxiliary verb "will have" + the past participle of the main verb.

Example: "I will have finished my project by next Friday."

This tense shows that the action of finishing the project will be completed by next Friday.

The other options are not correct because:

- Present indefinite tense is used to describe habits, routines, or general truths, and does not relate to future completion.
- Future continuous tense is used to describe an action that will be in progress at a certain time in the future, but does not imply completion.
- Future perfect continuous tense is used to describe an action that will be ongoing up to a certain point in the future, but does not necessarily imply completion.

Only the Future Perfect tense specifically shows the completion of an action by a certain time in the future.

The correct answer is: Misogynist

A misogynist is a person who has a strong dislike or hatred for women. The term comes from the Greek words "miso" meaning "hatred" and "gynē" meaning "woman".

The other options are not correct because:

- Philanthropist is a person who loves humanity and wants to help others, especially by giving money to good causes.

- Mercenary is a person who is motivated by a desire for money or material gain, often in a way that is considered selfish or immoral.
- Misanthrope is a person who has a strong dislike or hatred for humanity in general, not specifically women.

E. But, one of the primary reasons for such a situation has been Indian government's inability to take tough decisions.

A. Economists all over the world have expressed anxiety in this regard.

B. As a result, Indian people have been subjected to high cost of living and inflation.

This order makes sense because:

- Sentence C introduces the problem of slow economic growth in India.
- Sentence D explains that the global economic scenario has also contributed to this problem.
- Sentence E identifies the primary reason for this situation, which is the government's inability to take tough decisions.
- Sentence A shows the concern of economists worldwide regarding this issue.

The correct answer is: Polygamy

Polygamy is the practice of having multiple spouses, specifically multiple wives. It is a form of marriage where one person has more than one spouse at the same time.

The other options are not correct because:

- Misogamy is a hatred or dislike of marriage, not the practice of having multiple wives.
- Monogamy is the practice of having only one spouse, the opposite of polygamy.
- Bigamy is the act of marrying someone while still being married to another person, which is different from polygamy.

Note: Polygamy is often used to specifically describe the practice of having multiple wives, while polyamory is a broader term that refers to having multiple romantic relationships with the knowledge and consent of all parties involved.
